Shoppers can buy a half-tonne box of pasta from next Thursday at supermarkets in Turkey. Since it's too heavy and too big for the shopping trolley, delivery is included in the price. A supermarket chain sells the megabox for 999 Turkish lira, for charity. Guinness World Records have declared the cardboard box—at 1-and-a-half meters high and well over a meter wide—the biggest pasta box ever produced. The boxes will be sold at supermarkets in Istanbul. All the profit from the sales of the massive cartons will go for houses for homeless children. Turkey is the world's No. 5 producer of pasta. [reuters.com, accessed 26.5.12]

A dairy cow, named Darcy, escaped from her farm in Colorado, and went for a stroll. Staff at a McDonald's restaurant in the US were shocked—when the cow wandered up to the drive-through window. Darcy had somehow managed to open her gate and walk half a mile to the restaurant. The manager joked that he thought she was there for some fries and a strawberry milkshake. He couldn't imagine her wanting a burger. No way! Burgers are made from her relatives, after all!

A referee sent off five players because of a fight in the dressing rooms after a football match between Bradford City and Crawley Town. Mind you, the match was over when the fight started. The referee then went into both dressing rooms, and pulled players over to the side. He sent off three from Bradford City and two from Crawley Town. One of the players, Andrew Davies, is now set for a five-match ban after being shown the red card twice earlier this season. What bad luck!

A husband stormed out after an argument about his wife's cooking and nearly starved to death when he got lost in the forest surrounding his home. He was 69 years old. He walked out saying his wife's soup was too cold. He should have thought about the cold! He survived by eating frozen berries in the forest. After a month some farm workers found him and took him to the hospital.

Not all sculpture is created equal! This towering sculpture is made entirely from chewing gum. It's five metres tall and shows a young man cheering at a football match. More than 3,000 students contributed by sticking their pieces of chewed gum on the work. It's being exhibited for the first time at a festival in Eindhoven, Netherlands. Can you imagine the stickiness!
